Police Find New Liquor Sales Plan

Scheme That Prevents Securing of Evidence by Raising Party Evolved For Speakeasies

New Britain
New Britain, May 29—(Special)—John Maher, Jr., of 116 Farmington Avenue, formerly a lieutenant in this city, who was engaged in liquor sales yesterday night by Policeman Collins and Conroy, who found him selling the liquor and arrested him on a charge of transporting intoxicating beverages.

While questioning him today the police were told that he was managing the liquor to a place on Washington Avenue, where it was to be sold to a gentleman who frequented going to William Graham's, Bergin's, Fitzsimmons and other speakeasies.

The police have learned recently of a new method that liquor dealers have adopted as a means of preventing the police from getting evidence against places accused of dispensing intoxicating beverages. The method, the police believe, has been worked successfully in several instances and is an improvement of the more common practice of a peddler carrying a battle of liquor in a daze hall or at another gathering, and setting to dealing on the sly. In this case, the police say, the proprietor and some of his friends came to the place carrying the liquor in their pockets. When some one wanted to buy a drink an agent in a pocket contained in the pocket, the drink was produced and the cash collected. If the proprietor exceeds the law and has not hired the agent to carry it, and make sales, the agent is given a commission.

Since the development of the idea is comparatively recent it is not as well known in the state as in other states where it has been tried. The preliminary stages were not as well known, and the place that is being watched is still in operation under the advantage that the proprietor is paid while the place is actively engaged for the liquor business. It is a complete change from the old idea of the liquor dispensers making the rounds in the streets and pockets, and whey are gone they are gone the game is continued by the reassignment of the run of the places.

Brewer's triumphant return.

Michael Reni, of 30 High Street, who was arrested on a charge of assault on Saturday and released on bond for appeal, was arrested today on a second warrant charging assault.

According to the complaint, Mrs. Charles Keddy of 141 High Street alleged that she was being molested by Reni and her home today and kept an argument with him. Although neither she nor he had been in a fight, it was struck on the head and put to bed.

When arrested Reni was found in the back of the police station with a bottle of Whiskey and a man with a bottle of liquor, who had been drinking.
